My friends, first of all, thank you for your time!

All of us here at Safe in Austin are anxious to introduce you to our rescue family! We are a 501c3 nonprofit sanctuary for animals and children that come from abuse or have special needs. We believe in miracles, unconditional kindness, the magic of connection, and the healing power of animals. We humbly ask you to consider joining us in changing the world, by supporting our upcoming Gala- "Rhinestones for the Rescue"! We are in need of sponsorship donations and/or auction items! All money raised will go directly to our mission of "Rescue animals, Rescuing children!"

Some examples of our mission

-A child that spent the first decade of her life surviving horrible abuse and neglect only to end up in foster care and starting all over again with a new family finds an understanding friend in our Macaw Pebo. He is also afraid of people because of the ten years in a drug house. He too understands what it feels like to be somewhere that wasn't safe and having to learn to love and trust a new family.

-A boy with autism whose heightened senses have kept him from experiencing many things.... he not only touches, but kisses Peter the rescue pig on the head, shocking everyone who loves him! Peter was once considered trash because he was a sick piglet that couldn't be sold. Now he spends his days being our best secret keeper to anyone that needs to lay on his belly and share their heart!

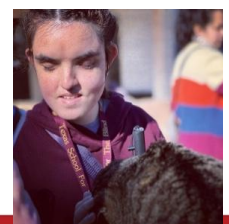

-A child with a history of horrific abuse who picks up one of the abandoned, orphaned, rescued puppies and tells him he knows it is going to be okay even though he sees the puppies scars. He knows he will be ok because the boy also happened to have cigarette burns on his body. The moment of understanding and healing that happened when this young survivor met a puppy that not only understands him, but has been where he has..... was absolutely magical.

-The young girl that comes to the rescue hiding her limb deformity because she is so use to trying to prevent people from staring or asking questions she doesn't want to answer finds out that there are many "lucky fin" friends here at the rescue that are just like her. Whether it's Halo, Cara, Sparky, Milly or Bunbun she gets to see how they are celebrated for being beautiful and perfect exactly as they are!

-The young woman who was trafficked her entire life by her parents meets Duchess and immediately breaks down. Duchess was a dog fighting breeder dog who was trapped in a cage hidden under a tarp getting bred over and over again for a dog fighting ring. Both understanding the feeling of being used for profit by the people who were supposed to keep you safe. Together offering each other hope and companionship they haven't found anywhere else.

-A blind child that finds comfort and understanding while grooming and loving on the blind cow that is "just like her".

-The child whose legs have never worked right because of Cerebral Palsy experiences instant joy when he meets a dog who has a wheelchair just like him.

- The domestic violence survivor dealing with fertility issues that finds an instant connection in our mare Meg who was on the slaughter truck pregnant headed to Mexico when we saved her, but unfortunately lost the pregnancy before she got to the rescue.

- A mother and her disabled son come to visit Patchula and her son Champion her miracle, quadriplegic calf with a broken spine. Champion is a medical marvel to every veterinarian that has met and heard about him, but to the mother of a quadriplegic child he, and his amazing relationship with his mother, is something altogether comforting and familiar and filled to the brim with so much hope. Champion's life, just like her child's, is worthy. Worthy of love. Worthy of a chance. Worthy of unconditional love and a chance to change the world.

- Isaac, our sexual assault survivor, was underestimated and given up on. The vet said he wouldn't walk; he would never wag his tail... he needed to be put down. He was horrifically abused and then tossed aside. The feeling of being "too broken" for anyone to actually care is a harsh reality to so many of our extreme trauma survivors. Today, Isaac not only does all the things they said he never would, but he offers healing and hope to everyone he meets because he is a clear and extreme example of hope.

This is the magic. These are the miracles. This is how rescue animals rescue children.

This is what we are all about.

What we do here is important, and it's also unique. We want to be a beacon of kindness. We want to prove to so many animals and people that have been hurt or lost in a broken system that unconditional love does actually exist, and we are willing to share it with them. When we hear from people that say, "I don't have any money, but my child is hurting, and I think we could benefit from your place"; my immediate response is "Love doesn't cost a thing and we can't wait to meet you!"

Unfortunately, while love doesn't cost a thing.... everything else does.

Our hope is that you are eager to join us in our mission of changing the world one special child and their life changing connection to a Safe in Austin rescue animal that understands!

Incredibly grateful for your time,

Jamie Wallace
